Woody Norris shows his amazing inventions – targeted sound

Posted at February 21, 2009 ⭐⭐⭐⭐⭐

Two amazing inventions from Woody Norris are shown in this utube video. He calls them "the next big thing" and shows how he can target sound directly at a person in the audience while nobody else can hear it.

He got an untraditional approach to education and inventing which he puts as: "Virtually nothing has been invented yet." So – what's next?

Woody Norris doesn't have a college degree. He signed up at the University of Washington school, but then decided that he didn't have the time in his life to learn about all these things which he was sure that he would never use them again. Woody Norris then started to take courses based on his interests and inspirations and not whether they would count toward a degree.

Woody Norris is selling his inventions to big electronic manufacturers and the US military. Car makers are planing in example to put targeted sound devices in the back of the car seats so kids could hear music, while parents are undisturbed. This video has been brought by Ted.com
